Notes:

- I'm responding more to the green mockup, it has the lovely grounded quality of a history museum where you'd find these artifacts. The blue has a clean art gallery effect, but I find the typography and gradients somewhat heavy and muddling. Let's move forward with the green version.
- The font and color palette are both lovely, I'd watch out for alignment though. I don't understand the padding for the title, and the title encroaches too far into the body of the image. The mobile version also needs to open up quite a bit; the font is too small, the leading is too tight, and the margins make the paragraph seem rather insignificant.
- I think the home button on the nav bar should be on one line like everything else. Maybe a different weight or size could help establish the difference?
- Overall, I really like this direction, just a few small adjustments. Also, feel free to cut the Influences page, other people seem to be including less content and I don't want you to have to do extra work.
